Taylor University 1846-1971

One Hundred Twenty-fifth Anniversary Edition

Bishop Taylor honored through University

The story of Taylor University begins back in 1846 with the Fort Wayne Female College. This institution, "the college that cares for the soul," headed by Dr. Alexander C. Huestis, enrolled one hundred students in the primary, academic and collegiate departments in the first year. In 1850 young men were admitted in a separate department, called the Collegiate Institute in 1853, which remained a distinct institution until 1855. By that year a great demand for higher education in the protestant religious faith for both sexes, stimulated by the return of so many young soldiers from the Mexican War, resulted in the consolidation of the Female College and the Collegiate Institute to form what was designated the Fort Wayne College. The College grew in population and academic prestige among the educational institutions of Indiana until the term 1890-99. At that time the financial crisis necessitated the sale of the school. It was sold to the National Association of Local Preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The new owners, Bishop William Taylor, at that time a preacher of world-wide fame, was the only man who had ever been elevated from the Laity—the ranks of the Local Preachers—to the high office of Bishop of the Methodist Church. The National Association sought to honor his Spirit-filled life, as well as his ecclesiastical accomplishments, by giving his name to their university.

Sammy Morris—a living influence

Shortly after the University assumed its new name under its management, the Association elected Dr. Thaddeus C. Reade to the president's chair. It was during the administration of this man that the most decisive events in the history of the school took place. In the fall of 1892, Taylor University admitted its "most outstanding student"—Sammy Morris. Sammy came to the United States from Africa, seeking to learn more about the Holy Spirit. He taught those who knew him more about the Spirit of God and what He can do in a fully dedicated and consecrated life than anyone else ever taught him. Mr. Stephen Merritt of New York City made arrangements to send him to Taylor University for the mutual education of both the institution and the new student. Sammy greatly influenced the citizens of the town as well as of the University, bringing a spiritual awakening with his complete faith and example of a totally surrendered life. During January, 1893, he contracted a severe lingering cold and realized that his hopes for evangelizing his people would not be accomplished by himself. When asked if he feared death, he replied, "Oh no, since I've found Jesus, death is my friend." And so he died, as he had lived, totally willing to do God's bidding. But his influence did not die with him.

On a visit he made to Upland at about this same time, Dr. Reade was shown some territory in this vicinity and negotiated an agreement with the Land Company to donate ten acres of land and $10,000 toward a building fund. In this way, Taylor was officially moved from Fort Wayne to Upland. Dr. Reade had hoped to help finance the move with the proceeds of the sale of the Fort Wayne property; but when it was torn down and sold, there was nothing left to the institution but a boxcar of old furniture. Even a setback like this could not deter Dr. Reade, however. He began immediately to draw up plans for an Administration Building and to materialize those plans on the new property at once. This was the building destroyed in the 1960 fire. It had been constructed of bricks made from clay dug right on the campus. Before the building project was finished, the panic of 1893 necessitated the stoppage of work. Short winter classes were held in surrounding churches or in available rooms, and the students stayed with the people of Upland. To further compound a seemingly impossible set of problems, the National Association of Local Preachers, the owners of Taylor, gave the responsibility of meeting the operating expenses to

Dr. Reade. The school now was completely on her own financially, faced with widespread economic ruin, buildings not completed, and no financial reserves upon which to draw. Again Dr. Reade achieved the impossible with the help of God and the memory of Sammy Morris. He wrote books, among them the famous Angel in Ebony; he traveled nationwide, preaching and telling, too, of Taylor's missionary emphasis and Sammy Morris. Money came in. A Sammy Morris Dormitory was built, and the building now housing the Grill and Bookstore was constructed as a boarding hall and girls' dormitory. And Taylor's future—through the incredible efforts of one man and the inspiring memory and example of another—was assured. By shortly after the turn of the century, President Monroe Vayhinger felt it was time once again to make plans for the beautification of the campus. In the spring of 1909, the first concrete walk was laid from the door of the Administration Building to the north entrance of the campus and then to Sickler Hall. After the gravel and cement had been carted in, the students turned out with shovels and hoes, mixed the concrete and laid the walk. Other walks soon followed, section by section.

Building projects aided Taylor

A new problem presented itself shortly. During the early years of the school, natural gas was abundant in the vicinity. A gas well on the campus was used exclusively for lighting and heating until 1906 when steam heat was installed. The exhaustion of the gas well, necessitating the switch to the more expensive method of heating, was a great financial loss to the school. The next arrangement, individual heating for each building, proved to be very inadequate: in the winters holding classes was almost an impossibility. A new heating plant was begun in the spring of 1911, built on the low plot of ground across from the post office. This plant was used for ten years, then replaced by the present one. The spot where it had once stood was, in 1925, as a class gift from the seniors of that year, transformed into what was for many years and many romances the most beautifully romantic place on campus—the Sunken Gardens. Another building project which was launched in 1911 was the Helena Music Hall, now most commonly called Shreiner. This much-needed building was made possible largely through the generous gift of Mrs. Helena Gehman, a woman interested in Taylor, whose will provided the sum of $7000 to be used in the erection of this structure. The entire main floor was equipped as music studios and practice rooms for individual study. Mr. Shreiner, a local preacher and friend of Taylor, agreed to furnish additional funds for a large music hall to be used for recitals and concerts, and thus his name was given to the auditorium on the second floor of this building. As a result of these fine facilities, the School of Music became one of the strongest departments of the University, while it still maintained various distinct schools of study. The addition of the pipe organ, given by the class of 1928, added to the musical enjoyment of all.

Ad Building fire crucial

All the major financial crises through which the school passed were not, however, far back in Taylor's history. The burning of the Administration Building in 1960 proved to be a more recent one. That fire destroyed the academic records of all past graduates from the school, many of the traditional memorabilia connected with the great past of the institution, like the Mace, the symbol of authority. The loss gave rise to a plan to remove the school back to Fort Wayne, but when it was decided to remain here, new life was infused into the old campus; more daring, long-range plans were made; and a major building program was launched.

Taylor expanded

Dr. James M. Taylor followed Dr. Vayhinger. During his term the acreage—and thus the indebtedness—of the institution was greatly expanded, and a great building program was planned. At this time, also, the Alumni Association was incorporated to hold property, and took the title from the National Association of Local Preachers. Magee-Campbell-Wisconsin dormitory was completed, but the financial difficulties became overwhelming. The school passed into a receivership to a group formed for the emergency, and call The Legal Hundred of Taylor University. The president resigned, and Dr. Robert Stuart shortly took up the reigns of responsibility. The year was 1931—the years of the depression were soon to reach a peak. The financial situation of the school worsened; it now became the property of the William Taylor Foundation. It is mainly through the efforts of Dr. Stuart that Taylor survived this time of crisis. He even managed to complete the building of Maytag Gymnasium.

Taylor grew as new buildings were added to the campus

But Taylor did survive, and went on to achieve even greater things than her founders had ever dreamed. After the war her financial situation began to stabilize. More students came. Now-abandoned war buildings were adapted for chemistry, biology and physics laboratories. The Ayres Memorial Library was built to accommodate the growing academic requirements of the rising number of students. MCW's basement was getting too crowded to serve any longer as the cafeteria. The Sammy Morris-Camp Dining Hall complex was constructed to house the largest number of men to date and to feed the whole campus. The continuous rise in enrollment soon necessitated even more extensive dormitory facilities; two new residence halls were financed and built on the south end of campus, East Hall for girls and Wengatz for guys.

At this same time, classroom space was found to be utterly inadequate. Government grants and the continued financial support of her friends and alumni enabled the school to construct both a modern new Liberal Arts Building and one of the finest, best-equipped science buildings for a school of our size. The Liberal Arts Building also houses an Educational Media Center, a resource-material bank of inestimable value to Taylor's many education majors, as well as of use to surrounding professionals in that field. The Science Building includes among its other equipment three computers, nearly essential in the training of students for most industrial, scientific and mathematics positions. Today the ownership of the school is held by a Board of Trustees, and the William Taylor Foundation still operates to assist in a fund-raising capacity.

Taylor students accept the challenge of the future

Taylor University graduated its 124th senior class during ceremonies held in Eastbrook High School on Sunday, May 31, 1970. The Baccalaureate speaker of the morning was Dr. Paul S. Rees, noted evangelical speaker. The seniors chose Professor Dale M. Jackson, class sponsor and speech instructor, to give the graduation address. An honorary degree, Dr. of Humane Letters, was bestowed by the school upon Bobby Richardson, former second baseman for the New York Yankees, and a man of vibrant Christian witness and ministry. The new graduates left the auditorium, ready to face the life ahead.

Summer is for learning

Many Taylor students engage in summer activities scattered all over this country, and even in countries abroad. This past summer the Wandering Wheels once again crossed the nation on bicycles, but this trip was somewhat distinctive: Doug Hassan, one of the guys who cycled from Long Beach, California, to Rehoboth Beach, Delaware, has been blind from birth. His presence in the group sharpened everyone's perceptivity. During a summer marked by growing anti-war sentiment and dire predictions for violence on college campuses in the fall, the Taylor Chorale spread a message of love and fellowship in Christ as they toured Europe. The trip gave students an opportunity to see not only Europe, but Europeans as well, and on a very personal basis. The experience was very eye-opening for all concerned. But all learning did not take place on the move across the States or Europe—students in summer school either on the campus or at the biology field station, Au Sable, Michigan, also discovered many new ideas. Whether the classroom was in the LA Building or out in the woods, the educational experience was the same. All who took part in summer activities agree that summer may be as good a time to learn as any other.

New Student Week is an absolutely crucial time for all involved: the returning students who have agreed to assume the responsibility of a hall counsellor's position attend classes to learn how to meet the needs of those who will be facing the challenge of college life for the first time; the new students come, are confronted with speakers and masses of strange people whose faces blur into confusing anonymity; but finally, perhaps over the supper of hamburgers, potato salad and baked beans cooked out on the parking lot and eaten on the grass under the trees, new students find that becoming a part of this brave new world is not, after all, an impossibility.

College life for on-campus students inevitably begins to center around the residence halls, more familiarly termed "dorms." Waiting, perhaps in vain, for something to appear in that empty mailbox; long, extended conversations on the dorm telephones; and an occasional, devotedly studious session of study at one's desk all are vital segments of life on a college campus. The friends one makes are usually somehow connected with one's dorm, as well. A bonfire at the lake with friends is the perfect center of attention on a beautiful fall or spring day.

Involvement of total community

Taylor is not an island unto itself; parents, alumni and trustees all play a part in campus life. All these people are given a chance to express an interest in the college, each group on its own special day during the year. Early in the semester, the whole university profited from the annual Trustee-Faculty-Student Conference, in which all the elements of the campus discussed together the goals each wished to see realized for the school. Shortly thereafter, parents had their day. Besides the normal welcome always accorded them, a special program of events was planned. Discussion groups were held in the morning, in which all who were interested discussed some of the problems and goals of Taylor, and the parts each one could play in solving and actualizing them. In the afternoon, all loyal fans turned out to cheer as the Trojans triumphed in the traditional Parents' Day football game. Later on in the year, the present constituency welcomed back to campus many alumni for the annual Alumni Talk-Back Day. These alumni, in many different fields of work, came back to tell the students how their Taylor education either helped or hindered them in attaining their positions or in later study. The activities of the day included both a chapel-conconvocation session, and individual or small-group confrontations with students.

Trustees met with faculty and students in several discussions.

Communitas expresses fellowship among men

The theme for this year's Homecoming weekend was Communitas, the Latin word expressing a sense of belonging, of involvement in the concerns and problems of the whole community. The floats tended to treat the idea of Christian concern for the salvation, both spiritual and physical, of the whole world. The calendar of events included the coronation ceremony of Queen Karen Isselee and the presentation of her court; receptions for trustees, faculty and alumni; three performances of Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing; a concert by the New Colony Six; tennis and field hockey matches; a cross-country meet; the traditional Homecoming football game, which Taylor won, defeating Manchester in an exciting, tense game; concluding with the student-produced Taylorama.

'70 theme — Peace through Revolution

No weekend is more exciting for the campus as a whole or for all the other people who come to join us than the Youth Conference weekend every spring. Months of preparation fly by as the cabinet try to get everything ready, from lining up speakers to making sure all who come have some place to sleep and somebody to waitress all those breakfasts that come so early after such late nights. Sooner than seems possible the time is upon us and the kids descend from everywhere. The weekend is fun, of course, but it is always more than just a good time. Speakers like Tom Skinner and Dr. Richard Halverson and the confrontations between students and conferees make it an exciting time spiritually as well.

Spiritual emphasis part of school life

Dr. Corbett, missionary speaker

Three times per school year the campus community takes time out to put an emphasis on the spiritual side of college education at a Christian institution. Once each semester a week of services in the regular chapel times and each evening, led by a special speaker, focus our attention on our spiritual needs and nature. This year's fall Spiritual Emphasis Week meetings were led by our Dean and Vice President for Academic Affairs, Dr. Gordon Zimmerman. The spring speaker was pastor Ray Ortland of Santa Barbara, California. The third campus emphasis on spiritual matters comes during the annual fall Missionary Conference, sponsored by Inter-Varsity Missionary Fellowship. Dr. Phillis Corbett, a missionary doctor in Congo, made all who heard her aware of the great responsibility that obtains to all in this country who have received so much, are to be accountable for so much, but give and care so little.

For students, faculty and staff in attendance, chapel-convocations were very interesting this year. Subjects under discussion or topics for lectures ranged from one session of the Faculty-Trustee-Student Conference, to an address by the Honorable Mr. Hoc, Ambassador from South Vietnam; from a time when the Wandering Wheels who went to Florida over the Inter-term break could share their experiences with the student body to a reading of his works by poet Paul Engle; from a recollection of their Christmas vacation by the Bronx Bunch, to a speech by the Honorable Governor of Indiana, Edgar D. Whitcomb.

Sunday evening services

The Sunday evening services this year have been under the direction of the new Minister to Students, Pastor William Hill, and his assistant, Jerry Young. The students were offered a variety of programs, ranging from the formality of the annual rendition of Handel's Messiah to almost spontaneous sharing experiences led by students. All these services gave the students in attendance real opportunities to establish, enjoy and profit from contact and fellowship with God. It is only to be regretted that more students did not take advantage of these meetings.

Four professors contributed a Faculty Reading to the dramatic offerings. Professor Jackson and Miss Rousselow of the Speech and Drama Department, and Dr. and Mrs. Hermanson of the Music Department read Goldsmith's She Stoops to Conquer. An addition to drama activities this year was the Religious Drama Company, developed and directed by Professor Goetcheus, department head. These students go out to give performances in churches and for organizations each weekend, and toured during spring vacation. The Speech and Drama and Music departments combined to produce a spring musical, The Fantastics. The final play of the year was the spring major production, Checkov's Cherry Orchard, directed by Mrs. Greathouse.

winter banquet theme

The theme of this year's formal winter banquet carried out the title, "Boar's Head Feaste." The cafeteria was transformed into a nobleman's castle, complete with a group of wandering minstrels who entertained the guests with old English Christmas carols; trumpeters who signalled the entrance of the lord and lady of the manor, the minstrels, the wassail bowl, the boar, and the flaming pudding; musicians who circled the hall playing guitars and flute and singing old ballads; and both a court jester and magician. Of particular note were the authentic costumes worn by the madrigal singers, the jester and the lord and lady of the manor; the dramatic accent lent by the presence of an actual whole roasted pig, complete with an apple in its mouth; and the rum pudding, carried in to a trumpet fanfare, and in its full flaming glory. The chamber singers, in the guise of wandering minstrels, added a touch of pure medieval beauty with their renditions of hauntingly unfamiliar but traditional Christmas melodies.

Following the feast, Edmonds and Curly regaled the merrymakers with a more contemporary, comical interpretation of life as they saw it.

The Student Union, a segment of total education, is not just a building, but student organization and program. By means of a Board, various committees and by the efforts on the part of many students in the areas of cultural, social and recreational activities, the Union functions to construct a well considered plan for college leisure life.

Designed within its structure, the Union Board points toward self-directed activity in an attempt to encourage self-realization and group responsibility. Activities cover most areas of entertainment, including jazz pianist Peter Nero; the hard sound of the "New Colony Six;" and lighter music by the "Classics IV." Camelot, The Reivers, King of Kings, Beckett and Bullit head a list of movies shown on campus.

The formal winter banquet and other cultural activities have a place in programming.

A ski trip to Colorado, bike trips and other recreational activities are enjoyed as well. Facilities such as horses, canoes, Hector's Hut and the Union recreational room are available to the Taylor community.

Trustees share concern at annual conference

The Board of Trustees, under the leadership of Dr. Lester Gerig, is responsible for making decisions which greatly affect the future of Taylor University. Their widely divergent experiences and walks of life enable them to make these decisions wisely.

The fifth annual Trustee—Faculty—Student Conference was held this past October. The theme of the conference was, "Christian Conscience and Pressure for Change." The purpose of this conference, which consisted of a series of chapels, convocations and discussion groups, was to provide Taylor students, faculty members, and trustees with an opportunity to discuss university issues together.

Trustee—Faculty—Student Conference involves discussion among all the components of the University.

President selected for community leaders award

A major requirement for sound growth throughout the history of an institution is the knowledgeable leadership of a concerned president. Dr. Milo Rediger exerts such positive influence. Since he served as a teacher and dean at Taylor before becoming president, he is well aware of the needs and concerns of the Taylor community. In recognition of his involvement with that community, he was selected to appear in the 1970-71 edition of Community Leaders of America. The honor was awarded on the basis of his service to the community and state.

Development Office plans future

Mrs. Fern Showver and Mrs. Alice Shippy, Secretaries

This is Taylor's 125th anniversary, but the Development Office is actually very young. It was established in 1965 with Dr. Gordon Zimmerman as the first Director of Development. This department works by a long, slow process that is beginning to move as seen in the construction of the new dining commons and the modular living areas for girls. Samuel Delcamp, Vice-President for Development explains that the department "enables the rest of the university to function, by implementing its programs and plans." Among the many duties are long-range planning of facilities, fund-raising, public relations, and publications. The most emphasis is placed on the area of fund-raising by contacting individuals, businesses, and foundations and interesting them in Taylor.

Another function of the Development Office is the area of publications directed by Wilbur Cleveland, University Editor. He prepares the Taylor Magazine, Profile, Taylor University Club News, and all the press releases. These news publications give people information and inspiration while at the same time they promote the Taylor atmosphere.

strengthened in press conferences

Mrs. Fredo Heath, Secretary

To improve communication between students and administrators, bi-weekly press conferences were initiated between student representatives and the administrative council. The aim of the meetings was to keep students aware of university affairs and campus attitudes.

Important to student life is the office of academic affairs. Working with Dr. Gordon Zimmerman in academic affairs are the Registrar, Director of Admissions, and Admissions Counselors. Academic Affairs' main role is to help retain a balance between students and faculty in communication and understanding.

Marsha Liddick, Secretary
Edwina McKewer, Secretary

Mrs. Ruth Crawford, Secretary

The Business Affairs Area operates under the philosophy of service and support to the education process, sensitivity to student needs and stewardship responsibility vested in each area of the University. This supportive role of the staff involves many divergent tasks, which range from providing the daily logistical support for the student body to comprehensive planning to keep pace with the innovative programs proposed by the Academic and Student Affairs Areas.

Although the personnel of Business Affairs are not directly involved in the classroom or residence hall situation, it is the objective of the staff to facilitate the effectiveness of the faculty through providing the necessary services and support. The extent to which this objective is achieved is one measurement used to evaluate the results of the efforts of the staff.

Mr. William Davis, Vice President for Business Affairs

Student Affairs directs services

New student orientation and job placement for seniors are two among many services coordinated by Student Affairs. Student Affairs is concerned with all campus activities that are student oriented. The concern of the students is Student Affairs' concern. This department strives to construct a climate whereby a student can reach his full potential and learn to be responsible to the community, himself, as well as to God. The Student Activity office works closely with SGO, SUB, and the Iron Waffle, the coffeehouse in Upland. These activities give students a chance to be volunteers in the community and leaders to their peers. Among the latest facilities and opportunities opened to students are the student placement center, career advising, and the tutor service for the children of the Upland Community. In the future, Taylor hopes to have a psychological counselling center available to Taylor students. Progress is made in education only when the needs and concerns of the students keep pace with the changing world.

Rev. William Hill, Minister to Students

Varied student needs met by people in background

In a Christian college, an important part of Student Affairs must be spiritual emphasis. Spiritual guidance is supplied by the Rev. William Hill, full time Minister to Students. New to Taylor this year, he supervises the TWO program, serves on the chapel planning committee, works with class chaplains, coordinates gospel teams, and counsels with students.

In order to function spiritually and academically, the Taylor students' physical health must be cared for. Taylor's Student Health center fulfills this need. The infirmary has three full-time nurses, three part-time nurses, and a visiting physician, Dr. Teodora Guevara.

Wandering Wheels, under the direction of Bob Davenport, has become an effective ministry for the Taylor student body. The three-fold purpose of Wandering Wheels is to grow deeper in Christ, to share their personal relationships with people on the road, and to strive to cross the U.S. on bicycles. Participants learn that there is a mission field right along the highway speaking with the truck drivers, gas station attendants, and others as they travel. Co-ed trips in January take juniors to Florida for a coastline trip. These trips are designed to give Taylor women first-hand Wheels experience.

Dr. Teodora Guevara, University Doctor

Mrs. Lily Haakinson, Head of Health Center

Miss Lynn Riefler, East Hall Head Resident

Even the youngest Taylor resident enjoys a cafeteria meal.

Mr. Walt Campbell, Wengatz Head Resident

Miss Marty Jackson, MCW Head Resident

Head Residents guide dorm life

Mr. Jim Mathis, Sammy Morris Head Resident

Vital to the effective operation of a university is its residence hall staff, especially the head residents. Head residents try to bridge any depersonalizing gaps a student might find in a university by being available for students when in need of a listening ear, advice, counsel, and disciplinary measures when necessary. When the student is adjusting to community life, the head residents are also available to encourage and to challenge the student to develop self-discipline in the personal freedom of being away from home.

Taylor's head residents are men and women who have a sincere concern for the welfare of each student in the hall. To become acquainted and know each student requires time and a whole-hearted interest. The concern of the head residents for the students goes beyond comfortable living. They are concerned for each student's respect for the other, as well as one's own personal responsibility in the college community situation.

Students study drama and public speaking

Oral interpretation of literature, the precision and logic of a debate, the mechanics of speaking and the dramatic presentation of plays all find a place in the Speech and Drama Department curriculum and pro-

The need for communication is a pervasive theme of today's youth. The Modern Language Department seeks to help its students cross international barriers to communication by teaching them the languages of other countries and by introducing them to different cultures through the literature of the people. Students may concentrate in the areas of French, German, or Spanish and may reinforce the classroom knowledge they have gained by becoming further acquainted with the cultures through the medium of the language club.

Orchestra now improved

The addition of a new orchestra conductor to the Taylor faculty has helped to broaden the opportunities available for students in the Music Department. A student may now be guided in a special emphasis of study in both vocal and instrumental music; band or orchestral music; conducting, teaching, or performing. Seniors exhibit to the school what they have learned in a solo voice recital or on one's major instrument.

The main emphasis of the department of Elementary Education is to help prepare Taylor education majors to develop insight and the skills necessary to be successful members of the teaching profession. Besides the courses offered the main means of realizing that goal is the Student Teaching program. The prospective teachers spend eight weeks conducting an actual classroom in one of the many schools which cooperate with Taylor in this experience.

PE: A demanding field

Physical Education demands more of a student than good sportsmanship or athletic ability. These are important, of course, and encouraged by having the students both participate in and officiate

Social Studies evaluate culture

Contemporary culture in America often seems too complex to be understood, even appreciated or remedied. The Social Science Department helps its students to evaluate our present by understanding the past that shaped History, Geography, Political Science and Economics. All have had their share in the formation of today's world, and all are explored. A new program this year, the Free University, further aids understanding by making students aware of present trends as well as past influences. Speakers discuss such issues as Women's Liberation and the relative merits of the United Nations.

Application is stressed

Business Administration majors are prepared for life in the business world by their studies at Taylor. Besides their classroom experiences, the students have the opportunity to evaluate various business fields through the Business Club which brings to campus men successful in different areas. During interterm interested students often work in actual companies, learning to evaluate their problems.

Reaching out to help others is the motive behind psychology. Senior majors get practical experience by visiting mental institutions, working in detention homes and counseling people on the Marion "Hot Line." Creative thought is encouraged through unstructured classes, experimental projects, and independent study.

In both the Mathematics and Physics departments, the course of study is geared to a solid education leading to either secondary education or graduate studies. The modern facilities of the Physics Department aid in the emphasis in the modern topics of quantum and nuclear physics. A strong background in the classical areas of study in the Mathematics Department develops the student's background for future study.

Sports

To every effort there is
A time, and a season
For every trial
Under the heaven:
A time to prepare,
And a time to see the Fruit of one's labors,
A time to work alone and
A time to try as a team;
A time to triumph, and
A time to learn one Cannot always be first.

Trojans display aggressive team

The 1970 fighting football Trojans were a small but well-conditioned team. Under the leadership and instruction of head coach Nelson Gould and assistant coaches Tom Jarman and Walt Campbell, our men on the gridiron completed a successful season. Consistently playing against heavier teams, they relied on speed and quickness to overcome their first five opponents. They were particularly impressive in wins over Ohio Northern University and Franklin College. Midway through the season, the Trojans suffered their first setback at Earlham College, but recovered with a heart-stopping final-second Homecoming victory over Manchester College. Fighting illness and injury to key players, Taylor played well in hard-fought defeats to their remaining three opponents. The team finished with a fine 6-4 record, which was evidenced by the all-conference selections of senior Gene Fadel and sophomores, Dan Archer, Deni McBrier, Paul Richards, and Dana Sorenson. The future looks very bright indeed with the return of many outstanding lettermen for Taylor's 1971 gridiron campaign.

Mike McGowan, a junior defensive end and co-captain shares his testimony. Mike says, "It was through football at Taylor that I realized how relevant Jesus Christ is in today's world. Seeing and feeling just how hard those guys tackled, blocked, and ran, really made an impression on me. Believing and trusting in God sure didn't make sissies out of the guys on the team, but made men who are just as determined to win ball games as anyone. I knew these guys had something special going for them and I wanted to be a part of it. I now realize that God expects nothing but the best in our efforts to play football for Him and Taylor University."

Netmen enjoy successful season

The Taylor netmen, under the outstanding play of sophomore all-conference star Jim Brown, finished with nine wins and only one loss. Up until the Manchester match, the team shut out three opponents and allowed the other five only one point. The playing of Gary Rickner, who was undefeated in singles competition, John Clarkson, Tim Mann, and Ed Mehlberg contributed much to what was an overall successful team season.

Although the aggressive play of all-conference senior Gary Rickner will be missed, Coach Sheldon Bassett looks for another fine year next season.

Cross country runners

God led me into cross country running through another person. It was not my idea at all. Whatever success I have attained has come by way of God. My prayer is that I can channel all of my successes into a richer and more meaningful life for His service. I give thanks to God and Taylor University for their leading me to the level of success that I have attained in the sport of cross country.

turn in winning record

Taylor's Ralph Foote, 1970 cross country National Champion and All-American.

Opening the season with a convincing win in the Taylor Invitational, the Trojan Harriers continued on to complete another excellent season. Led by the brilliant running of All-American Ralph Foote, followed closely by Brad Ludwick and Oliver Taylor, they easily captured the Hoosier College Conference and competed superbly against many major college teams throughout the season. Under the tutelage of Coach George Glass, the Trojans trained and sacrificed for workouts often as much as two and three times a day in preparation for meets. But the conditioning and the dedication payed off in the kind of results that Taylor students have become accustomed to seeing. The highlight of the season was the first place finish by Ralph Foote in the Big-Little State meet, as the team finished a high sixth.

The game of basketball is hard work, perspiration, and pain. It has its exciting times, and it has its depressing times. Basketball offers moments of glory, and it offers moments of ridicule. Basketball is a test! It tests self-discipline, will power, determination and willingness to cooperate. As a player at TU, I have experienced all of these. During these years, Taylor has continued in its winning tradition, yet the true success of these seasons cannot be measured by the win and loss records. Only changed lives can show the true measure of success. Through my basketball participation, I have grown in my relationship with Christ, which in itself has made basketball successful for me.

Individual stars earn

After streaking past their first eight opponents the Taylor Trojans were hampered by injuries and inconsistent performance on their way to the overall season record of 17-10. Three early conference losses put the Trojans, who finished 3-5 in conference play, out of contention for the HCC championship which was captured by the Earlham Quakers.

The Trojans were led during most of the season by their leading scorer senior Steve Reash who averaged 23.5 points a game. The superb ball handling, passing, and shooting of Reash won him the most valuable player award in the annual Taylor Tourney. As a result of both a knee injury and an ankle injury Reash was forced to the sidelines for the remainder of his career with six contests remaining.

Dominating the backboards in most of Taylor's games was Scott Parsons, a 6'4" sophomore who controlled 19.8 rebounds an outing. Seniors Merrill Skinner and Gary Rickner added poise, leadership, and hustle to this year's team. Junior members of the team showed roundball ability with promise for the future.

shows potential

Lacking consistency, the Taylor B-Team basketball squad struggled to an 8-10 record. At times the team members showed brilliant shooting, passing and hustling, but failure to maintain this level of play during crucial minutes in the course of a game allowed opponents to gain an upper hand often.

Wayne Bocken, the leading scorer with 17.7 a game, and Joe Manifold, the leading rebounder with 14.7 a game, were rewarded for their play with occasional varsity appearances and show potential for future varsity service. Also shooting for a spot on next year's Varsity squad will be Steve Zurcher, 16 points a game, Tom Holmes, 14 points a game, and Rick Minnich, 10 points a game.

Coach Sheldon Bassett, in his first year at Taylor, stressed the fundamentals of shooting, defense, hustling and team play.

Being God's representative is the ultimate goal.

Wrestling is probably the most physically demanding of all sports. Making weight and the grueling workouts are enough to scare anyone. But the most difficult task in my wrestling is giving everything to Jesus. Giving all to Christ is an easy thing to say and it has become a cliché with Taylor athletic teams. But there were times when the team had won and we all felt lousy because we knew Jesus wasn't pleased with our effort. It all comes down to a verse in Romans 12:1—"... present your bodies a living sacrifice ... which is your reasonable service."

Mark Marchak

A Taylor grappler shows his finesse.

Taylor grapplers wrestle for God's glory

Being a very demanding sport, wrestling requires 100% of the athlete. Coach Tom Jarman and the Trojan grapplers wrestle for more than the glory of winning; they wrestle to represent Christ. A verse which states the philosophy of the wrestlers is I Timothy 4:8, "For bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things . . ." Representing Christ on the mats, whether they win or lose, makes wrestling worthwhile for the Trojan wrestling team in Coach Jarman's philosophy of wrestling.

Scoring the most points in the 1970-1971 season were Dana Sorensen, Micky Gaydosh, Dave Sorensen, John Marchak and Mark Marchak. The season's only undefeated wrestler of the season was Micky Gaydosh. Highlighting the season was the winning of the Hoosier College Conference crown even though the end of the season was marred with injuries and ineligibilities.

Individual excellence key to track victories

The Trojan track team, led by the long distance running of Ralph Foote, the sprinting of Terry Jordan, and the long jumping of Mark Govertson, achieved many victories for an outstanding season. Highlights of the record breaking season were the Hoosier College Conference Championship, the Little State Championship, a 98-56 victory over Ball State University. An outstanding individual performance, including a school and HCC record was given by Ralph Foote in the two-mile with a time of 8:57.7. Brad Ludwig finished tenth in National competition in the mile. Running in the decathlon in National competition was Mark Govertson. Other fine performances for the season were made by Doug Gregory in the half-mile, Terry Jordan in the 100 and 220, Wes Goodwin in the hurdles, Tom Hoffrage in the discus, Charlie Hess with the pole vault, and Dan Gordon in the triple jump. Although the Trojans will lose many fine competitors, an exciting and winning season is anticipated by the returning lettermen.

Diamondmen pitch way to fifth

The Trojan baseball team completed an exceptional season in which they tied with Earlham for the Hoosier College Conference Championship and won their fifth consecutive NAIA District Twenty-one championship. Selected to the Hoosier College All-Conference team were Gary DeHaven, Dennis Ladd, Jim Messner, and Dennis Roach. Receiving NAIA All-District Twenty-one acclaim were Gary Busse, Dennis Ladd, Jim Messner, and Chris Rood. Outstanding pitchers for the 1970 season were David Griffie, Dennis Ladd, and Merrill Skinner. Chris Rood, a Senior second baseman, was voted by teammates as the year's most valuable player. As a further highlight to an already highly successful season, Coach Jack King was voted District Twenty-one Coach of the Year.

Although the outstanding play of seniors Dennis Ladd, Chris Rood, Gary DeHaven, Gary Busse, Dwight Johnson, and others will be greatly missed, there are many returning starters to provide a good nucleus for a winning season next year.

Each day brings victories and defeats in my personal life. Defeats can hurt me but victories can also pose a problem. The greatest victory that I own and which did not pose a problem to me in any way was when I accepted Christ into my life.

As a baseball player at TU, I strive mainly for victory. To gain a victory is what competition is all about, but yet I can not win all the time. I feel that I can not win at all without the help of my teammates and most of all Jesus Christ. Baseball was number one in my life, but now is in the number two position behind my Father, which is in Heaven.

As I reflect over my last three years on the TU golf team, I recall many situations that have been meaningful to me. Few people realize the many draining hours of practice the team puts in out on a cold and windy course. This requires a special kind of discipline, especially when one is all alone as so often is the case. It is totally an individual sport with no one to blame but oneself for any short comings. Golf not only brings a physical strain but a mental strain as well to the conscientious player. Even though the hours are long and the strain is great, it is wonderful to know that one really doesn't play alone when Christ is with him. Playing with Christ gives a deep satisfaction for one knows he has done his very best if he plays by His rules.

Linksmen place third in HCC

Beginning the season with a trip to Florida, the 1970 Golf Team gained a head start on many teams as they were able to shape up their game. Highlighting the spring travel was the largest college tournament ever held in the United States with 85 teams competing.

Even though the 1970 team was all underclassmen the scores were the best of any golf team in Taylor's history. Trojan golfers finished third in the HCC and fifth in the state NAIA. The linksmen showed great potential and promise for coming seasons.

Finishing as the second individual in the Hoosier College Conference for the season freshman Stacy Clark was voted Most Valuable Player by his teammates. Coach Don Odle indicated that Stacy's finish in the Conference was the highest of any golfer in Taylor golf history.

Taylor emphasizes four dimensions in which growth occurs. In relation to sports, the physical stands out. The sharing of victory and defeat with people in sports who know the feelings and desires of training and competing has helped me to understand many things. I enjoy striving for physical fitness. In order to have a winning spirit you must be willing to push yourself beyond your limits. This determination can be instilled for all of life.

Perhaps I could capitalize the spiritual growth area because this is where I feel I have grown the most. God relates to everything I do. Dedicating each moment of play to Him has made sports more meaningful to me.

equals good sportsmanship

Sports for women at Taylor are an endeavor to help complete and fulfill the lives of Christian women. Six sports are offered for competition: field hockey, volleyball, basketball, la crosse, tennis and track. Each sport demands the time to discipline the body and mind to be keen and alert. Competition in women's sports is just as grueling as in men's sports, especially to be mentally and physically capable of meeting all situations that arise.

Making a front row return requires agility and grace.

Highlighting the fall field hockey season was the Taylor competition in the Miami Valley Tournament. Linda Holdcroft played in the semi-finals of the MVT at Lancaster, Pennsylvania. The women's basketball team found a real unity in teamwork in their game against Marion College. Helping win the victory were Carolyn Butler with 19 points and Sue Van Dyke with 18 points. Coaches Miss Melba Kern and Miss Charlotte Knox are pleased with the unity and the sportsmanship of the teams. Unity, hard work and keen competition are combined by all who participate to make women's athletics rewarding and challenging.

 To every purpose
 Under the heaven:
 A time to create harmony,
 And a time to keep silence;
 A time to be at the head,
 And a time to learn to be
 A loyal follower;
 A time to express personal
 Initiative, and a time
 To be one of a group.

Student government-by the

John Hanson, SGO V-Pres.; Rich Meyers, SGO Pres.

The Student Government Organization was founded "in order to establish representative government for the purpose of promoting spiritual, intellectual, physical, and social student development; to protect the general welfare of each individual; and to maintain the motto, LUX ET FIDES."

Patterned after our national government, SGO consists of the executive council, the student senate, and the student court.

The executive council, led by SGO Pres. Richard Myers is responsible to be a liason between the school and administration and faculty and the senate. It must also establish the body's policy and it must carry out passed legislation.

The senate is comprised of elected representatives, one for every hundred constituents housed in the respective residence areas. Presided over by SGO Vice-President John Hanson, the senate has initiated a free university program, a student loan fund, a change of freshman driving regulations allowing freshman to drive after first semester, a university night and a service for taping and printing chapel addresses.

The student court represents the disciplinary body.

An effective link between students of the different classes is personified in the Inter-class council and the class officers. Their duty is to work out the problems and misunderstandings which arise between classes and also to relate changes in the administrative policies including the reasons behind the changes.

In the resident halls, the link of communication is seen through the hall counselors. Students are invited to talk to the hall counselors concerning problems and concerns which they may have.

Unity—the strength which supports our purpose

“Alive with Power” was the theme that characterized this year’s Youth Conference. Much prayer and hard work helped to make the conference a success for Taylor students as well as for the high school students who attended. The speakers this year were Bill McKee, well-known evangelist and youth speaker, and Billy Zeoli, president of Gospel Films Inc. Both men provided their listeners with messages that were very relevant and meaningful.

The cabinet was under the leadership of Jo Ann Kinghorn and Gary Sinclair. Their efforts along with those of their many workers helped to make Christ live in a new and vital way.

Another student oriented activity was Homecoming which was a success this year due to the efforts of eight member committee. They chose the theme of “Communitas” to emphasize the relationship of those on campus and the relationship between Taylor and the world.

The usual festivities and class floats were also a part of Homecoming. Careful planning to provide entertainment, emcees, a program and an organized ceremony was all a part of the arrangements making homecoming another beautiful memory for the Taylor community.

love in community

Providing an outreach toward spiritual growth and personal development are Personal Evangelism, Inter-Varsity, and Christian Action Fellowship. The goal of Personal Evangelism is to minister to the spiritual needs of children and senior citizens in the community. Inter Varsity's outreach is directed to the promotion of missionary activity both on and off campus. Highlighting the year was the Inter-Varsity Urbana Christmas Convention, involving national and international Inter-Varsity chapters.

Christian Action Fellowship is for both students and the community. This group provides fellowship for non-athletes as well as athletes. The highlight for CAF during the year was to sponsor two retreats at Epworth Forest.

The primary goal of Gamma Delta Beta is to help each girl to discover aspects of her personality, her community, and her God. The year began with a Freshman Tea followed by individual chapter rush parties. New members were then inducted at a formal gathering of the Gamma Deltas. Visiting convalescent homes, children's homes and the Veterans' Hospital were all a part of the club's many activities this year. The Gamma Deltas also sponsored a Sadie Hawkins Day and the annual Spring Banquet. Through its activities, the society strives to help each girl gain the poise and confidence needed for a well-developed personality.

The Student Education Association provides students with an opportunity to associate with students from other institutions. Attendance at state and regional meetings was especially encouraged this year in order that the students might experience different philosophies and methods of teaching. The SEA is composed entirely of elementary and secondary education majors who are planning to enter the teaching profession. The SEA is a member of the National Education Association. All members receive the Today's Education magazine to keep them up to date on modern teaching methods. The SEA was honored to bring to Taylor's campus this past semester Mr. John T. Many clubs on campus are primarily concerned with an outreach to our world and its many needs. Business, science, politics and sociology are all areas of involvement on Taylor's campus. These organizations help to get students engaged in activities outside the campus and to widen their views on external situations. Through these clubs, students can better relate to their world's problems and concerns. This active concern is all a very vital part of Taylor's goal to become "effectively Christian."

Taylor students are exposed to the many cultures of our world through the combined efforts of the German, French, Spanish, and International Clubs. The language clubs serve as opportunities to further skills in the language and to better acquaint the students with the countries involved. The International Club provides opportunities for students of other countries to assist one another with common social, academic and spiritual problems. The friendships gained in the language groups are carried beyond the bounds of the organizations.

Communication—a big word with a great meaning

Communication at Taylor is furthered by many different organizations on campus. The radio station WTUC strives to provide students with a means of expression and identification. This is done through programs which are geared to give personal enjoyment, educational stimulation, and spiritual enrichment.

The Who's New is compiled to give useful information regarding all the students on campus, with a special emphasis on the freshman class.

Alpha Phi Gamma, a national journalism honorary, invites students who have worked on the Echo and

To encourage creative writing the Parnassus staff publishes the Parnassus each spring. Each article is an original piece of student work.

The 1971 Illum staff was headed by co-editors Bev Rupp and Becky Wilcox, aided in the critical area of photography by assistant editor Bill Davisson. The work of organization and creative thinking began in April with the editorial appointments. When the actual work began in the fall, the very able staff contributed much valuable time to make this year's anniversary edition of the Illum one of the best books ever. As the year and the work progressed each who had a part found out just how much he could actually squeeze into a day, and surprised himself at the things he could do, finding it an excellent learning experience.

Echo Echo Echo Echo

What is an echo? An echo is that which closely imitates or repeats another's words, ideas, or acts.

Throughout the year many complaints were shouted telling of dissatisfaction, misunderstanding and a definite lack of communication between the Echo staff, students, and faculty. On the other hand, many students enjoyed reading the articles, attractions and advertisements presented in the Echo. Regardless of opinion, the Echo presented material for stimulation of thought, which in turn provided an opportunity for educational growth.

A few of the mottos seen on the walls of the Echo office provide more food for thought. One reads:

"When I am totally alone I see how shallow my values are. I have learned that knowing people and ignoring their potential is destructive both to them and to me."

The Echo staff worked diligently every week to print the newspaper.

Students develop self-expression in arts

The arts have a very prominent place in the Taylor curriculum. The Trojan Players provides opportunities for members to participate in the various facets of dramatics. They get first-hand experience from producing and directing many plays throughout the year.

Another aspect of the arts is seen in the Art Club. This club is composed of anyone who has an interest in art.

It provides the members with opportunities to meet together with others who share mutual interests.

The Debate Team is selected on the basis of experience, interest, and ability in intercollegiate debating. They meet each week to practice for tournaments which are held approximately each month to debate national topics.

Pemm Club, T-Club, and Women's Recreation Association provide an opportunity for both the guys and gals of the Taylor family to put the books aside for a short time and totally involve themselves in physical activity.

These programs make it possible for the students to gain the rewards of complete physical exertion as they enjoy participating with those who share common interests. This social aspect combines with the spiritual, academic, and emotional aspects of college life to create a well-balanced person.

Music on the move keeps pace with a world on the go

Autumn weather found the Taylor marching band preparing diligently to spur enthusiasm and school spirit for the half-time entertainment of home football games. As the weather turned colder, the band moved inside and began rehearsing for concert season. The annual band tour took the students to the Chicago area where they performed in churches and schools alike.

Summer 1971 will find the Taylor band in South America. They will be the guests of the missionaries of Columbia, Ecuador, Venezuela, and Jamaica during their stay.

The band feels their responsibilities are to provide an added experience in the life of the student in the Christian college and to help spread the Gospel of Jesus Christ through music and testimony.

spread through music

Spreading God's love through the use of music is the aim of Taylor's Chorale, Oratorio and Chamber Singers. During the summer of 1970, the Chorale sang their way through Europe. As they traveled and sang, they had many opportunities to share God's love with the people they met. But sharing God's love did not end for the Chorale when they returned to the States. Through concerts and chapel programs the medium of music continues to spread the message of God's love.

Chamber singers is almost exclusively composed of music majors while Oratorio consists of approximately 200 members and is open to all students. Oratorio performs two concerts a year, The Messiah at Christmas and King David at Easter.

For there is a time
For every purpose and
For every work:
A time to be born, and
A time to die;
A time to kill, and
A time to heal;
A time to love, and
A time to hate;
A time of war,
And a time of peace.
I know that,
Whatsoever God doeth,
It shall be for ever:
That which hath been
Is now; and that which is
To be hath already been;
And God requireth
That which is past.
He hath made everything
Beautiful in his time:
It is the gift of God.

1971 was a great year. All the copy has been written, all the layouts are drawn up, all the pictures are cropped and our office is closed. And so we dedicate this book . . . to you the students of Taylor University, for without your many experiences this book could not have been.

. . . To Mr. Larry Glaze, our Paragon representative, who was always there to help and to guide us . . . Mr. and Mrs. Norm Cook, our photographer and his wife, who continually helped us in our tight situations . . . Mr. Wilbur Cleveland, Taylor's campus editor, who always had that picture that we had forgotten to take . . . Mr. Jules Walker, a good friend, who never minded taking and developing pictures for us even though he was very busy . . . and to our many administrators and professors, who were always there to answer our questions and to provide valuable materials.

. . . and most of all to the Ilium staff. Many long hours went into this book, and so we give it to you—a reward for a job well done.
